Nature Clinical Practice* journals introduce Advance Online Publication

Nature Clinical Practice is delighted to announce that a selection of its content is now available via Nature Publishing Group's (NPG) Advance Online Publication (AOP) program.

The AOP program allows users and subscribers to gain advance access to the journals' unique Practice Point articles, which put original research articles into context and offer expert opinion on best practice. The Practice Point articles are available in each of the eight journals in the Nature Clinical Practice series. With the addition of the AOP feature, this content will now be available online before the print issue of the journal appears.

The Nature Clinical Practice journals deliver timely, authoritative interpretations of key research developments in an easy-to-read format, translating the latest findings into clinical practice. Content includes editorial and opinion pieces, highlights from the current literature, commentaries on the application of recent research to practical patient care, thorough reviews and in-depth case studies. There are eight journals in the series covering the disciplines of gastroenterology & hepatology, cardiovascular medicine, urology, oncology, neurology, nephrology, rheumatology and endocrinology & metabolism.
